Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

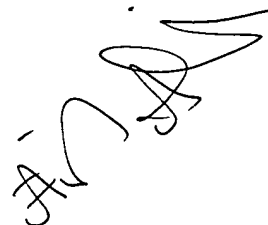

- 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

- Claims 13,39,67 and 113 are directed to non-statutory subject matter. "A recording medium having recorded a program..."
- This claim is non-statutory because the terminology "A recording medium having recorded a program..." alone has no set definition; in this regard, as recited in MPEP 2106, computer-related inventions are either nonfunctional descriptive material or functional descriptive material, computer programs fall into the second category, wherein, descriptions or expressions of the program, are not physical things, they are neither computer components nor statutory processes, as they are not acts being performed, such claimed computer programs do not define any structural and functional interrelationships between the computer program and other claimed elements of a computer which permit the computer program's functionality to be realized and are only statutory when recited as being embodied in a computer-readable storage medium.
